POLICY.

Special Dispatch to The N. Y. Tribuna.
COLUMNUM, Ohio, Thursday, Sept. 13, 1866.
In conversation with Gen. Cox last evening, Gen. Grant and Admiral Farragnt declared their disapproval of the President's policy and commended that of Congress. Both gentlemen said substantially that they were participants in the President's campaign tour by express instructions, and not from any inclination on their part. The conversations were not strictly private, for several parties were present. Secretary Seward was seriously ill while here, and left this morning with the party without experiencing any improveat in his condition.

THE RECEPTION HE RECEIVED AT CINCINNATI.

CINCINNATI, Thursday, Sept. 13, 1866. This afternoon's Times says : "The reception yeserday in this city, was the most creditable of the whole tour Mr. Groesbeck's welcome was by far superior to any other similar address, and the President's address was far less marred by indecencies and indignifies."

The Gatette anys: President Johnson stated publicly that he was very mu loased to see so much public order prevail in the city, an ersonally complimented Chief-of-Police McGraw on the al lost perfect order which had been maintained."

The Everyiter says:

"As the party passed from the Spencer House to the carriages in waiting to convey them to the demonstration to the President was beyond description. Many persons warmly grasped the bands of the President with the sociamations of God bicss you. Mr. President, "May you live to restore the Union and establishment, beare and harmony throughout the land. About fifty carriages filled with the Committee on Reception and the Exercise followed the President to the depot, where another immense crowd was assembled, which warmly cheered the President and party."

The Commercial says:

The President has a resonant and far-resoning voice, and, seemingly, not in the least impaired by his recent much speaking. His style is declaratory, and exceedingly carroast and any disjointedness that may be detected in reading his remarks was little observed in the cannestness of his declaration. The crowd that listened to his speech was evidently attracted by curiosity rather than by enthusiasm or admiration for the President. It was an orderly, intelligent and respectible gathering, and there was manifested throughout the tresident's remarks a spirit of firmness and a willingness to steen to whatever was to be said. After being introduced and taking me by the hand, he said, 'I am not a politician. The President of the United States is my superior officer, and I am under his command. I say of you, if you have any regard for me, to march your company away, as I do not wish to be thus annoyed. I consider his a political demonstration, for a selfish and political object, and all such I disapprove of. I came here to enjoy the performance, but I shall be glad to see you all to-morrow, at the Euront House." Gen. Grant at Wood's Theater:

Three chee:s were proposed for Grant. Calls were made for Gen. Custer, who appeared on the platform and said: "I was born two miles an a-half from here, but I am ashumed of you."

The cars then moved on.

These and other utterances met with generous responses in strong contrast with the behavior at Newmarket.

A DELEGATION PROM PITTSBURGH.

The Pittsburgd Committee of Reception came on board a Steubenville, and informed the President they had been ap pointed by the citizens to escort him to that city. It con sisted of the Hon. R. McKnight, Col. McElroy, Col. Kerr, Mayor Duncan and others.

BURGETTSTOWN, PENN. Bungerisrows, Penn.-4 p. m.-The President was her warmly welcomed by Dr. Bradley in a neat speech, to which he responded, saying that if the people do their duty all the States will soon be in happy accord. He invoked them to consider the questions before the country, and to act to prevent the powers of the Government from being absorbed in one branch of it. He further addressed the crowd, and was not only listened to with attention, but repeatedly cheered.

When about eight miles from Pittsburgh the train halted, when Mr. J. E. McCabe approached the President on the plat form, saying: "I ought not to be afraid to shake hands with you, for I have shaken hands with President Washington. His principles I love, and I love you because you advocate his principles. The President thanked him and entered into a brief but pleasant conversation with him. An aged negro riding on a mule came up, and taking off his hat addressed the President as "Massa Johnson." One of the bystanders exclaimed, pointing at the negro, "There, boys, is the cause of all this trouble." This little incident occasioned much laughter.

About half-past five o'clock we reached South Pittsburgh. A very large mass of people were there assembled, workmen and laborers having left their shops, and the women and children deserted their houses. Confusion and excitement pre vailed, and harrabs followed the passing train; national salutor were fired; all the way to Pittsburgh were throngs of inter ested spectators. We soon reached the railroad station, and with difficulty the excursionists made their exit through surg ing and pushing crowds. Every high point in that neighbo ood was thronged, and confusion ruled the hour. In vain olicemen asserted their authority; the crowd was too large be effectually held back. After some delay the President. General Grant, Admiral Farragut, Secretary Welles, and others of the party, were scated in open barouches, driven by four horses and decorated with little flags. The procession passed through the principal streets.

The procession arrived at the St. Charles Hotel at about 7 and here a dense crowd had preceded the excursion ists. Soon after entering the botel, the President was escorted to the platform, which was erected for the occasion, and which was crowded with spectators. Thousands thousands of persons thronged in front of the hotel, and for several blocks on each side of that establishment. There were continuous hurrahs, hootings, hisses, calls for Grant and Farragut, while on the other part of the mass cries went up loud and strong

Judge McCandless was in company with the President. He endeavored to secure silence, but, this being unattainable, he addressed the President, welcoming him to Pittsburgh. While Judge McCaudless was delivering his address there were calls for Grant and Farragut, while others believed and groaned, whooped and made all other conceivable kinds of noises. The larger portion of the crowd seemed to be def termined to prevent, by their disorder, the delivery of any speeches. The President approached the front of the platform and waved his hat as if to command silence. This e was somewhat successful, when the President commenced his

The crowd continued grouns and shouts for more than an hour, when Ges. Grant appeared on the balcony and told the people they had better disperse to tasir homes, that they had seen everything and should retire quickly. He endeavored to speak further, and waved his hat to the crowd in a deprecatory manner; but the noise was so great that he could not proceed, and was obliged to retire. After this, shouts of various kinds were continued. Cries for Johnson were mingled with grouns and cheers for every prominent political character, including Beecher and Tyng.

The display of flags that were obnoxious to the crowd elicited considerable jeering and boeting. But, although the crowd was peaceably disposed and with the exception of a few small fights and several sudden dispersions, did not proceed to any serious acts. After Geu. Grant's remarks it commenced to throw out, but now and then seemed to acquire new vitality and continued to announce its presence with considerable ondness until a late hour of the night.

Lanora, an Indian bandit, commanding the Imperial forces (2,500 strong) at West Sonora, was defeated by the Liberals under Pesquiera. On account of this action, the French garrison at Gunymas had gone to their relief at Hermasillo, leaving the fleet to defend the harbor.

The Gunymas (Mazatlan) Nses of August 23 says the French had received orders to occupy Sonora permanently as indemnity for French claims. These orders are said to have been received from France, and based upon the supposition that Maximillan was unable to offer any other form of indemnity.

The Hon. Charles L. Beale then arose, and after making a short but eloquent address, heartily and strongly advocated the renomination of the Hon. The people of the XHth District knew that his past record, both in the ranks and in the halls of Concard Dutchess for Representative in the that has past record, both in the ranks and in the halls of Congress, was a bright one. NEWBURGH, Sept. 13, 1866.

The campaign opened here lest night under the auspices of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Association of the Boys in Blue. It was a grand spectacle. The body of the hall was occupied by the Boys in Blue, who crowded the hall; hundreds could not get near the hall. Such a meeting, like the news up from Maine, is anything but pleasant to the bread-and-butter men here. The specches of Col. Hecker and Gen. Van Wyck were received with great applause. The reception that Gen. Van Wyck met with was most flattering. The allusion to him as a caudidate for the XLth Congress was received with tremendous applause. On the whole, the meeting was the greatest success ever known in this vicinity. Look out for a rousing majority from Newburgh for Fenton and a Radical Congress.

MR. REWARD.

A correspondent at Auburn writes as follows of the opinion entertained of Mr. Seward by his neighbors:

If any changes against the great Union party might be expected in this State through the unaccountable course of Mr. Seward, they might certainly be looked for among his neighbors and life-long friends at his home in old Cavuga. But we can say, with an absolute assurance of truth, that if the changes are of a similar character in other portions of the State, the great Republican Union party will carry the election by 50,000 majority and then we will comply with Mr. Seward's wish, expressed at Niagra Fals, by counting him oat. Mr. Seward's friends in this county lament his course with unfeigned sorrow and are bowed in the deepest mortification, but not a soul of them proposes to follow his lead by deserting the party he did so much to upbuild and the principles he labored so long to inculcate. The acora he planted has become the towering tree, its wide-apreading branches and deeppiercing roots design all storms and adverse winds.

The work of his life-time, to which he devoted the vigor of his early manhood and the mature judgment of his riper days cannot be overcome and annihilated by the apostacy of old age.

Chaplains. The Grays and ex-Grays marches through the principal streets, preceded by a fine band of music, under the leatership of Mr. John Lyon of New-Haven.

At a fittle past 2 o'clock p. m. the procession arrived at Masic Hail, where a magnificent dinner was prepared under the superintendence of Messra. Alths of the New-Haven House and Lockwood of this city. The hall was lavishly festconed with flags, and upon the tables were boquets of every variety and form. At the rear end of the hall was lavishly festconed with flags, and upon the tables were boquets of every variety and form. At the rear end of the hall hung the portraits of Cd. Henry Merwin, Major E. Waller Osborne, and Chaplain Jeseldah Chapman, who died while fighting honorably during the late Rebellion. After the company had enjoyed the rich visuous with which the tables were loaded, ex-Mayor Galpin, who acted as Chairman, rose and introduced private William Kenne, Principal of the New Haven High School, who read a very interesting history of the company from its organization in 1816 down to the present time.

Next followed Mr. Henry G. Lewis, an ex-member of the Grays, who made quite a witty speech, keeping the guests in good humor for nearly half an hour. He was followed by Gen. Kellogg of the Second Brigade of the Connecticut National Guard. His speech was very eloquent, and he was continually cheered while he occupied the floor. Mr. Walter Osborn was next called for, who spoke briefly, but in a manner which brought three hearty cheers from the young Grays. The Rev. Mr. Sili, Rector of St. Thomas's Chapel, New York City, next responded, and in his usual happy style made a speech quite acceptable to his fellow-soldlers of 40 years ago and the younger mumbers of the Grays. Col. Toller came next in order, and his appearance on the floor was the signal for three long cheers, as he was an old favorite with the Grays, and did good service in the late war, acting as Major in the 15th Connecticut Volunteers.

Lieut.-Gov. Winchesier of Connecticut followed up Mr. Raldwin's remarks referring to Msj.-Geo. Terry, and also paid the General a namber of well-earned compliments.

Other apseches were made by ex and present members of the company, and the afternoon passed off pleasantly. The day was one of the most charming of the season and the fiftieth anniversary of the Grays has been most successfully carried out. carried out. Special Dispatch to The N. Y. Tribune.

The Fenian pic-nic at Darley Park yesterday was attended by about 3,000 persons. President Roberts was not present. Gen. Nell, who commanded at the Fenian invasion of Canada, was present and made a stirring speech. Capt. Hines, formerly of Gen. Sweeney's staff, also made a speech. Gen. Neill alluded to the recent expedition and intimated that its failure was owing to the deception practiced by the high officials of the Government. He predicted a very different result next time the Fenians should strike a blow. Capt. Hines congratulated his hearers on the growth of public sentiment in Tayor of the Fenian cause, and said the sympathy of the American people was with them, no matter how the Government might act.

Purchasers of Sewing-Machines will be interested in he following statements:
Mrs. H. B. of Rockford, Ill., writes to Messrs. Wheeler &

Wilson:
I send you a Wheeler & Wilson Machine, No. 10,426, to have strached the recent improvements—the improved loop-check tonsion, glass foot, new style hemmer, braider and corder. I have used this machine for six years seithout repairing, and in that time it has earned for me a little over $4,000.

Mrs. F. H. F. of Elizabeth, N. J., writes. I have had one of the Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machines. No. 6,352, for ten years. It has been used by myself, family and friends, constantly with no general for reside.

years. It has been used by myspif, family and friends, constantly, with no expense for repairs.

Two hundred and fifty thousand witnesses might be called the number of machines manufactured by the Wheeler & Wison Co., but these two testimonials are sufficient to direct attention to a very important particular. Simplicity in the structure of a machine is of prime importance, as regards its comprehension, facility of working, and need of repairs. Friction from complication of parts and movements is sure to work mischief. A sewing-machine should be able to make 1,000 stitches a minute, say eight hours each day. This would give annually about 150,000,000 of stitches, or, in ten years, 1,500,000,000, and of course, require a corresponding number of morements. Hence, the bearing and moving points and surfaces should be carefully observed. Are there many points to oil, or is much oil required? If so, the machine will soon want repairs.

of movements. Hence, the bearing and moving points and surfaces should be carefully observed. Are there many points to oil or is much oil required: If so, the machine will soon want repairs.

Sewing with a machine is such an advance upon handswing that it should not be surprising to hear any machine commended. Those, however, are best qualified to judge of their comparative value, who have tried more than one thoroughly. A machine may, by some peculiarity, be well suited to a special work, and yet poorly adapted to the general purposes of sewing. Many of what are called seliring points in a machine are simply trivolous, and intended to tickle the fancy of those who are sold. It is no great recommendation in a horse for family use, that it can walk on three legs; and so useless tricks in a sewing-machine should be ignored. Substantial excellencies only can stand the test of time and use. Are the offices it performs useful, and does it execute them well.

Other questions are important. Is the Company honorable and responsible? Are its guarantees well filled? Does if furnish facilities for supplies and repairs! Usually those promise most who intend to perform least. Scores of manufacturers have disappeared and left purchasers of machines with no means of repairs or of obtaining needles and parts of machines, greatly to the detriment of the Sewing-Machine business.

In the testimony before the Commissioner of Patents, the witnesses, well qualified from observation and experience, directed his especial attention to the simplicity of the Whoeler and Wilson Machine, and its consequent freadom from near and need of repairs.

John Sibley deposed: I must declare the Whoeler & Wilson to be the most wonderful and comprehensive sewing mechanism ever pat into the American market. It is the simpletts as well as the most conning in principle. There is genius and high mechanical ability in its arrangement, and therefore it is most reliable and easy is keep in order. There is a directness of connection between the power and the quiet and rapid in action of any two-thread machine. Other machines cannot keep up with it. I now sell all kinds, and sell ten of these to one of any other: Others come back for exchange with many murmurs and complaints; these never. Once sold, they are gore, and as an article of merchandise they are always salable. REAL-ESTATE IN SOMERVILLE, N. J.-The beau-
